RAN INTO SOME HEAVY WEATHER

Capt. Mesquita Says Recent Gales Worst Since the Portland Breeze.

After an absence of 14 weeks, sch. Laverna, Capt. John McInnis, arrived last night with 110,000 pounds of salt codfish. During the first nine weeks of the trip, the Laverna fished on the Labrador with the poorest results. From there the vessel fished on Quero bank where the greater part of her catch was made. The Laverna left here June 30.

Sch. Frances P. Mesquita, Capt. Joseph Mesquita also arrived during the night with a good trip. Capt. Mesquita encountered two severe gales which he says were the worst he has faced since the Portland breeze. All but two of his dories were damaged by striking against the side of the vessel.

Sch. Arkona, Capt. William McKay, from Bradore Bay, has 416,000 pounds of salt codfish for Cunningham & Thompson. Capt. McKay, who is only a young man, is the son of Capt. Jack McKay, now in sch. Gossip.

Steamer Thelma, Capt. Elroy Prior, got another trip of bluebacks yesterday among which were a few mackerel.

Today's Arrivals and Receipts.

The arrivals and receipts in detail are:

Capt. William Firth, formerly in sch. Fannie E. Prescott is fitting sch. Imperator for haddocking.
Capt. Gilfoye is fitting sch. Mildred Robinson for the same kind of fishing.

Pleased With Lobstermen's Action.

State House, Boston, Oct. 5.—The state fish and game commission is quite enthusiastic over the good work that can be accomplished by the newly organized groups of lobster fishermen at various points on the North Shore for the purpose of preventing the sale of "shorts." It is also in hopes that this movement will spread to the fishermen of the South Shore so eventually these men along the whole Massachusetts coast can cooperate to prevent what threatens to be the total extermination of this valuable variety of shell fish.

For years the Fish and Game Commission has been preaching the doctrine that it was a very short-sighted policy on the part of the fishermen themselves not to put back into water such short lobsters as their pots brought up, but heretofore there has always been a certain number of men who would persist in breaking the law and selling these "shorts" by an underhand method. The commission estimates that the total catch of lobsters depreciates about eight percent annually, and it is only a question of time when they will be exterminated on the water front of Massachusetts.

It has done what it could in the way of seizures, bringing people before the courts, etc., to bring an end to this "short" selling business, but while it does not want to admit that its efforts have been failures, it is practically saying that the fishermen themselves if they will live up to the proposed plan of their organization, can do much more to carry along this branch of the fishing industry than can the commission itself.

Another feature of the lobster fishing industry as relates to the "shorts" is the situation that prevails in Maine in connection with the Boston market. Maine legal length of a lobster is 10 inches, while here in Massachusetts it is 9 inches. The commissioners are led to believe that quite an industry has developed detrimental to the Maine lobster business of catching "shorts" in that state, that is those between 9 and 10 inches and selling them to Massachusetts dealers.

According to the Massachusetts Fish and Game Commission, this transaction is put through in boats outside the three mile limit, so that the state authorities down in Maine cannot do anything about it, but they are hoping that the Massachusetts shippers idea will spread eastward and be taken up by the Maine fishermen themselves and bring about the conclusion of this peculiar transaction.

Wharf and Freezer Change Hands.

The wharf and freezer property, formerly owned and occupied by the late Frank Stanwood, has been sold, Anthony Cooney and his father, Capt. Frank Cooney, being the purchasers.

The property, which is one of the most desirable at the Fort, will be put in first class condition, and will be occupied by A. Cooney & Company, who will move from their present location at the Fort to the new location.

Capt. Cooney will probably also be associated in the firm, which will engage in the fresh fish business on a more extensive scale, operate the freezer and conduct an oil business.

The firm may engage in the salt fish business, as there is adequate facilities for carrying on this branch at the new place.

The firm started only a few years ago, and has conducted a successful business, until it has outgrown present quarters.

Oct. 7.

New Schooner Sails.

The new sch. Evangeline C. Nunan sailed early this morning for her home port, Cape Porpoise, Me., in charge of an engineer and Capt. Nunan. Like the other vessels of the Nunan fleet, the new schooner will engage in single dory haddocking.

Str. Thelma's Crew Making Money.

Str. Thelma, Capt. Elroy Prior, stocked $863.65 and the crew shared $32.08 on three days blueback fishing. The steamer sailed early this morning on another trip.

PLENTY OF FISH BUT BAD WEATHER

Seiners in North Bay Took About 20 Barrels Each Last Thursday.

Mackerel are still plentiful in North Bay but on account of bad weather, the fleet have been doing little or nothing.

Some of the crafts, however, took about 20 barrels Thursday. Fish are still plentiful, so it is stated in a letter to the Times.

PORTLAND FISHING NEWS.

Capt. Gouverau III, Leaves for Home Here by Rail.

The local fishing situation is much improved, the extreme scarcity which prevailed last week in practically all kinds of fish having been relieved by several good sized catches landed within a few days. The schooners Albert D. Willard and Wesley Sennett brought in about 25,000 pounds of market fish, while the little schooner Fanny Reed, which has been fishing for five weeks off Scatterie and along the Cape Shore of Nova Scotia, showed up with 36 swordfish, most of them of large size, one in particular it is claimed being about the largest of the species ever landed here, weighing nearly 800 pounds. The skipper reports seeing the Edmund F. Black a week ago, she having 31 fish at the time. The Black is the only one of the local swordfishing fleet now out, and it is expected that she will return this week. Good round prices are now being paid for swordfish, a fare of 50 landed at Boston a few days ago bringing 14 1-2 cents. The fleet of steamers which have been fishing out of this port until recently are now operating at the westward, where bluebacks are reported quite plenty, several good sized catches having been made, the steamer Enterprise of Tiverton, R. I., having brought in 120 barrels Sunday.

Another fishing arrival Sunday was the Gloucester handliner Claudia, returning from a three weeks' cruise on LeHave Banks, she having 800 pounds of halibut, and 12,000 pounds of salt cod. Her skipper, Capt. Andrew Gouverau came ashore sick and started by rail for his home at Gloucester.

Let Go Two Anchors.

It was necessary to let go two anchors to prevent sch. Margaret Dillon, lying at the fish pier at Boston yesterday, from striking the stone abutment of the pier. The heavy wind created considerable confusion in Boston harbor.

Good Drift Stock.

Sch. Good Luck, Capt. James Goodwin, stocked $1125 on her recent fresh drifting trip.

Big Money Made by Boat Fishermen.

The little fleet of Italian boats some of the small shore boats str a harvest last week, the prolific of hake and commanding high pr at Boston being most opportune to fishermen.

The high liner for a single n fishing is Sam Scola who made on a single trip which he sold at ton. Scola carries two men b himself who did well on every d the week. Others of the fleet n from $250 to $300 on a night's set.

Bait was scarce and the fisher used cunners, bluebacks and i anything they could get hold of. S were fortunate to get squid and n ally took the cream of the fishing.

Shore market fish sold high a week, the prices being highest s last winter. For an example, a s ment of large hake from here sold 15 cents a pound alone.

The fishermen have been setti Boone Island and in the bay where fish are still reported plentiful.

CAPT. McDONALD ILL AT HALIF

Popular Skipper Removed Hospital According to D patch to Owners.

Capt. Daniel McDonald, skipper sch. Catherine Burke, one of the cal halibuting fleet is seriously i Halifax, having been removed a hospital in that city.

Capt. Jerome McDonald, owner the craft, received a telegram y day notifying him of the skipper's illness and yesterday afternoon here to take charge of the craft, look after the captain.

It is supposed that Capt. McD has been afflicted with an old ment. His many friends here elsewhere sincerely hope that h illness is not of a serious nature, that he will speedily recover.

Oct. 8.

Neutral Trawlers.

Beginning October 1st, according orders issued by the British naval authorities, "No neutral trawlers w allowed to fish on the east coast England, but may continue operati on the West Coast." This order affect large numbers of Dutch Danish trawlers now using Gr as their fishing base.

Fine Swordfishing Share.

The Cape Porpoise sch. Richa Nunan, which landed 51 swordf Boston yesterday, struck a good ket. It is reported she sold e cents, which netted her an ex stock, her crew sharing $138. As far as known she is the last vessel engaged in swordfishing the season may now be called e
